Trending now — 1 topic with a genuine brand angle

1	NielsenIQ data reported by ABC News (Oct 26) shows a split signal heading into Halloween weekend: candy/gum/mint unit sales were down nearly 7% by mid-October versus the same point last year, while candy prices are up almost 8% over the past year (45% over five years), driven largely by chocolate, whose average unit price rose 11.7% even as units sold fell nearly 10%. A genuinely new, dated data point distinct from Kroger's inventory-commitment story already covered Oct 23 — this one is about softening demand and rising prices, not a restocking push.	ABC News — Halloween candy sales data; ClaroSports — chocolate price/volume data via NielsenIQ	Instagram/LinkedIn, owner-to-owner inventory-caution post. "New data: candy sales are down nearly 7% this year while prices are up almost 8% — chocolate especially. If this weekend's order was built off last year's numbers, it might be worth a second look before Saturday, not after. Pricier doesn't always mean people buy the same amount." No pricing/discount claim of our own — a factual, dated demand-signal post distinct from every other Halloween-stocking angle used this month.

Skipped, no genuine angle today / unconfirmed: World Series status — Brewers led 3-1 after Game 4, with Game 5 played Oct 28, but no source confirmed the Game 5 result or whether the series has ended; held rather than report an unconfirmed score. Diwali (Nov 8) — only pre-festival sale-calendar and India-market forecast coverage found, nothing US-merchant-relevant. NACS — nothing dated this week beyond the already-covered Show. TikTok “Two Fishes” audio — live and current, but every brand-twist attempt felt forced; held rather than stretched. CBD/hemp news, merchant cash advance news, gift-card/loyalty news, retail theft/shrink data, fintech/payments news — nothing reliably dated to this week surfaced.

Compliance check: the one idea doesn’t imply pricing, encourage overconsumption, or use underage-adjacent framing — it’s a factual, dated demand/inventory-caution note with no discount claim and no age-restricted product framing.
