1	Target's Early Black Friday Sale is live today, Nov 5–7, 2026 — confirmed launching today with specific details distinct from the Oct 28/Nov 1 "window confirmed" stories: the Deal of the Day program is returning, and early coverage cites up to 50% off toys. A genuinely new, dated-today detail (the sale actually starting, with concrete specifics) rather than a repeat of the schedule-announcement angle.	Today.com — Target announces Black Friday sale details 2026; MoneySavingMom — Target Black Friday sales 2026	LinkedIn/Instagram, owner-to-owner readiness nudge. "Target's Early Black Friday sale just went live — Deal of the Day is back, and toys are already discounted up to 50%. Big-box holiday shopping is officially underway, 3 weeks before Thanksgiving. If staffing and stock plans are still built around the day-after-Thanksgiving rush alone, this is the week to stretch that out." No pricing claim of our own — a scheduling/readiness nudge grounded in a specific, live competitor event.

Skipped, no genuine angle or unconfirmed: Halloween final spending results — only NRF's pre-event $13.5B projection found; no actual post-holiday tally published yet. Convenience-store industry news — nothing dated past mid-2026. Diwali business news — still only generic coverage, nothing dated to this week. State vape/smoke law — New York's 75% wholesale nicotine-pouch tax is a genuinely new mechanism but its effective date is two months old, too stale to use as “trending now.” TikTok trends — no November-dated sound/challenge could be confirmed. Loyalty-program news — the only semi-recent item is Canada-specific, not a fit for a US audience. Gas prices — no current-week figure found, held rather than risk a stale number.

Compliance check: the one idea implies no pricing, no overconsumption, and no underage-adjacent framing — it’s a neutral scheduling/readiness nudge grounded in a real, live competitor sale, with no alcohol/tobacco/CBD product mention.
