Trending now — 3 topics with a genuine brand angle

1	Real 2026 data on small-business owner burnout — 68% of owners lose at least one night of sleep a month to money worry, 53% feel emotionally drained specifically by business finances, and family time (45.8%) and physical health (42.2%) are the most commonly cited personal sacrifices — yet 77% still say running their business met or exceeded expectations.	Beancount — Bluevine 2026 Small Business Burnout Guide, Lonely Entrepreneur — Founder Survival Gap	LinkedIn, founder-voice post. “Both of these are true at once: most owners say the business was worth it, and most owners are also losing sleep over it. If any part of your week is still manual reconciliation, manual reordering, or a manual end-of-day count, that’s hours you’re not getting back. Not a cure for burnout — one real lever you actually control.” Genuinely empathetic, not a hard pitch, ties loosely to automation without naming a feature.

2	The FBI has flagged a growing "quishing" scam — fraudulent stickers placed directly over legitimate QR codes (menus, parking meters, payment displays) that silently redirect a scan to a fake page; email-based QR phishing alone grew 146% between January and March 2026.	Guard.io — QR Code Scam ("Quishing") 2026	Instagram/LinkedIn, quick security-awareness post. "If your store uses a QR code anywhere a customer scans it themselves — a loyalty sign-up, a promo, a payment prompt — it's worth a 10-second physical check for a sticker that looks added or slightly raised. Low effort, real protection against a scam that's actively growing." Practical, no product claim required.
3	Energy drinks are now 37.8% of non-alcohol beverage sales in convenience stores and are driving nearly all of this year's category growth — Circana data shows 2025 dollar sales up 10% to $16B+, and Casey's reported a 14% jump in energy drink sales in a single quarter, calling it a primary growth driver.	CSP Daily News — C-Store Beverages Post Positive Performance, Q1 2026, Yahoo Finance — Energy Drinks Are Fueling Casey's In-Store Sales	Instagram/LinkedIn merchandising post for convenience stores. "Energy drinks are now over a third of non-alcohol beverage sales in c-stores and driving almost all of this year's growth in the category. If your cold vault space hasn't been rebalanced to match that, the shelf math is probably already out of date." Data-driven, no overconsumption framing — this is a non-age-restricted category note, purely a space-allocation insight.

Skipped, no genuine angle today: another MLB postseason angle (ALCS starts today, but this is the fourth time postseason content would've run this month — already pulled back yesterday for the same reason), and nicotine-pouch/tobacco tax news (the NY and SC tax stories are already covered in the Oct 6 brief; nothing new surfaced this week beyond repeats of those same figures).

Compliance check: none of the above imply pricing, encourage overconsumption, or use underage-adjacent framing — #1 is empathetic owner-to-owner content, #2 is security-awareness with no product pitch, #3 is a factual, non-alcoholic-category merchandising note.
