Trending now — 6 topics with a genuine brand angle

1	Government shutdown is disrupting SNAP/EBT processing nationally. The shutdown (started Oct 1) has already left roughly 2,500 retailers unable to process EBT transactions in a prior lapse this year, and SNAP funding itself is now flagged as at-risk past October — a live, ongoing story, not old news.	PBS NewsHour — Why many stores can't accept food stamps during the shutdown, AOL/USDA — SNAP benefits face "insufficient funds" in November if shutdown continues	LinkedIn / founder-voice post. Not political commentary — pure operational reassurance for c-store and liquor store owners who take EBT alongside card/cash: "If SNAP processing hiccups during the shutdown, your register shouldn't. Here's how RetailzPOS keeps card, cash, and EBT running as three independent rails, so one going down doesn't freeze your line." Pairs with a simple graphic: three payment icons, one greyed out, two still green.

2	MLB Postseason is live. Division Series runs Oct 10-16, League Championship Oct 18-26, World Series Oct 30-Nov 7 — a six-week stretch of high-traffic game nights for any store near a TV or a regular's couch.	NBC Sports — MLB Postseason Bracket, Matchups, Seeding, Schedule 2026	Instagram/Facebook Reel + Moolah Points tie-in. “Postseason beer run” Reel: quick cuts of a cooler being restocked before first pitch, a line moving fast at tap-to-pay, game audio in the background. Caption ties to a real promo: “Double Moolah Points on every six-pack during Postseason week — because your regulars are watching anyway, might as well reward them for it.” Run it as a real, time-boxed Moolah Points promo, not just a content hook.
3	Halloween has stretched into a 6-8 week retail season (“Summerween”), and low/no-alcohol is one of the fastest-growing categories within it. Gen Z is shopping Halloween earlier and across more trips instead of one weekend, and 53% discover what to buy on TikTok first.	Circana — A Seasonal Boo-st: How Halloween 2026 Is Shaping Up Across Categories, NIQ — Halloween Confectionery Trends Shaping Consumer Spending	LinkedIn thought-leadership. “Halloween isn’t a weekend anymore, it’s a season — which means restocking on gut instinct for ‘the one big Saturday’ is the wrong model this year. Multi-trip Halloween shopping means multi-wave restocking, and if you’re adding NA beer/seltzer as a new shelf category for the first time, you need to see it as its own line, not folded into ‘beer.’” Natural segue into RetailzPOS’s category-level inventory tracking — stated as a planning insight, not a pitch.

4	TikTok's "Suspect" trend — creators playfully call out a friend or family member as "the suspect" with a hyper-specific, affectionately embarrassing habit, mock-crime-scene style.	Gelato — TikTok Trends Right Now	TikTok, format-jack — Moolah Points angle. "Suspect: buys the same tallboy and a lotto ticket every Friday at 6:04pm, has for 8 months straight 🇺🇸" — shot POV from behind the counter, played completely straight, ending on a warm "we see you, regular ❤️" beat (anonymized/ consensual — a real regular who's in on the joke, or stay generic if no one's signed off). Caption: "Moolah Points knows your regulars better than your memory does." Light, not a hard sell.
5	"Exhausted/had enough" reaction-meme energy is having a moment (the current wave: "Tired Ben Affleck" — bone-tired expression, eyes closed).	SocialBu — 30+ Popular Memes Right Now in 2026	Instagram/TikTok meme post. Reaction-format still: owner's face at 11:47pm manually counting the drawer and re-adding a paper tape by hand, captioned "me doing end-of-day reconciliation by hand in 2026." No product shot, no CTA in the image itself — just the relatable pain point; first comment (not the caption) drops "RetailzPOS closes out your day in one tap — we built this because we were tired of it too." Low-pressure, meme-native, not an ad dressed as a meme.

6	Instagram’s format shift toward educational carousels and raw, unpolished content — carousels now get roughly 9x the saves of single-image posts, and studio-polish is underperforming confessional, data-backed posts.	Metricool — 2026 Instagram Study: Formats, Strategy, and Data	Instagram carousel, reusing existing compliance data. Repackage the fake-ID/age-verification stats already in the RetailzPOS content library (90% of fake IDs now carry barcodes that pass a basic scan) as a plain-text, swipeable educational carousel timed for Halloween costume season — when fake-ID attempts tied to costumes/parties genuinely tick up. No new research needed, just a format change to match what’s actually winning saves right now.

Skipped, no genuine angle: international vape-flavor-ban news (Ireland/Belgium — not a US retailer concern and too regulatory/political to touch safely), and two currently-trending reaction memes tied to political figures (kept off-limits regardless of reach, per brand guardrails).

Compliance check: none of the above imply pricing, encourage overconsumption, or use underage-adjacent framing — #1 and #6 are framed as operational/compliance reassurance, #2 and #3 as inventory/loyalty planning tied to real, time-boxed promos, #4 and #5 as light, consensual, non-promotional format-jacks.
